

APPLAUDED THE PASTOR.

THE REV. C. A. HULLA'S CONGREGATION AROUSED BY HIS SERMON.

Cries of "Amen!" and "Bless the Lord! Interrupted Him as He denounced Criticism of the Bible and Sensational Preaching—Wild Enthusiasm in the Church.

There was a regular two-feast and season of spiritual publication at the Bedford Street Methodist Church—Merton and Bedford streets, yesterday morning. The Rev. Dr. Lindford A. Hull, preached on "The Criticism of the Bible." The effect of the sermon upon the audience was unusual, even in a Methodist church. The preacher first laid his respects to the criticism of the Bible by scientists and philosophers and atheists, and then he suddenly switched to Christian ministers, whom he said, had ceased to preach the plain gospel of Christ, and the Bible after criticizing both, and had given themselves up to putrid discussions of the latest novels, theatrical performances and politics. These clergymen he handled without gloves and without analogy, and he succeeded in laying them to the complete satisfaction of those who heard him.

When the preacher began criticizing the Christian critics of the Bible, the congregation seemed to lose itself. In earnest attention the people grew enthusiastic, and then the state of their feelings found expression in loud cries of "Amen!" and "Bless the Lord!" and "Glory to God!" The sermon was received with some elation, even down in the southwest corner of the church. Next some women, evidently in view of the point, caught the spirit, and then it spread from row to row until finally the popular bell-willughby enthusiasm congregation, singing hymns, and forthrightly about their individual understandings, so great was the effect of the sermon that at the close of the services some of the men embraced one another and thanked God for such a sermon and such a preacher. One man exclaimed:

"Would to God he could have talked an hour longer. That preaching strikes from the shoulder."

The text was from Isa. x. 25: "He—said unto him, What is written in the law? How readest thou?"

Dr. H. A. Johnson Thinks There Is a Plot to Turn the Church of England to Rome.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Agnew Johnson of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church preached on "Baptismal in the Anglican Church" last night.

"I stand for the idea that no man is infallible, no set of men is infallible," he said. "But I recognize the right of any man or set of men to their honest convictions. Much is being said in the newspapers about ritualism in the Church of England. Historically the Church was never strongly Protestant. It was only partially Protestant, as is distinct from the Church of Rome. It is true that some of the staunchest advocates and leaders of Protestantism were members of the Church of England, but there has always been an element in the Church with a strong tendency toward Romanism. There is now in England a most enthusiastic revival of that tendency, and it has taken a decided form."

And one who has examined the actual status of this movement cannot but recognize that it is far removed from the religious fervor expressed by the Baptists and Methodists.

"High Church to-day stands practically for the Romish Church—that is, priesthood. When the Rev. Mr. Agnew Johnson, a few weeks ago, told his critics that they don't know every thing, B. P. W. Johnson, of the New York Times, said: 'That is dangerous.' But with becoming modesty that the critics of the New Church are not, in fact, the enemies of the truth, the author of the statement, the Rev. Dr. Dixie and Lewis, told me, was most anxious, Christ did not know it. He decries the lack of knowledge of Christ."

"God preserved so much for Hisuse."

"What is the secret of England's freedom? That is the secret of England's strength. The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."

"The secret of England's success is that England is a nation of Christians."